- Examination of the compliance with the requirements for filing an application for registration [1]

Within a month of the filing date, AGEPI shall examine the compliance with the requirements for the grant of a filing date and the entry in the National Register of the applications for registration. In the examination of the compliance with the requirements for the grant of a filing date, there shall be verified the following:

- conformity of documents of the filed application;
- proof of payment of the prescribed fee for filing the application.

In case of irregularities, the applicant or the representative shall be notified thereof and shall be granted a 2-month period of the filing date to remedy them.

Within one month of the date of entry of information relating to the application in the National Register of the applications for the registration of appellations of origin, the National Register of the applications for the registration of geographical indications or, where appropriate, in the National Register of the applications for the registration of traditional specialties guaranteed, AGEPI shall examine the compliance with other requirements for filing an application with a view to the publication thereof.

Following such examination, AGEPI shall:

- accept the application for publication, if it establishes that the application complies with the requirements provided for in the Law and the Regulation;
- notify the applicant of the detected irregularities and request, within a 2-month period, the removal thereof.

Where, following the notification, the applicant does not remedy the identified irregularities within the prescribed period or does not file an application for the extension of that period, the application shall be deemed withdrawn, which is notified to the applicant or the representative thereof.

- Substantive examination of the application for registration [1]

The substantive examination of the application shall be carried out by the AGEPI within 6 months from the publication of the data regarding the application.

During the substantive examination of the application, AGEPI shall examine:

- whether there are no grounds for refusal referred to in Article 7 of the Law;
- oppositions submitted in accordance with Article 22 of the Law.

Depending on the findings of the substantive examination, AGEPI shall adopt the decision to register, as appropriate, the appellation of origin, geographical indication or traditional specialty guaranteed or reject the application. The decision shall be notified to the applicant within one month from the date of adoption.

Where, during the substantive examination, it is found that the appellations of origin, geographical indications or traditional specialties guaranteed may not be registered, AGEPI shall issue a provisional refusal of registration, notify the applicant of the grounds for refusal and grant a 2-month period from the date of receipt of the notification with a view to withdraw or amend the application or submit an appeal to the notice of the provisional refusal.
