The 55th Series of Meetings of the Annual Assemblies of the World Intellectual Property Organization was opened by the Director General of WIPO, Francis Gurry. He mentioned that increasing interest in intellectual property worldwide is driving uptake of WIPO's global intellectual property systems and resulting in a healthy financial state for the Organization.

In his address to the hundreds of delegates of the Member States participating in the meeting, Mr. Francis Gurry referred to the advancements in the integration of infrastructure underlying the worldwide intellectual property system, particularly in developing countries, as well as progress in public-private partnerships with WIPO involvement.

Director General of WIPO noted that in addition to the continued growth of WIPO's global intellectual property systems – the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT), the Madrid System for the Protection of Marks and the Hague System for the Protection of Industrial Designs – geographical participation has evolved in line with more general economic trends. Thus, Asia now is the main origin of international patent applications, accounting for around 40% of the total, as against 30% for North America and 27% for Europe.

The Director General of WIPO drew attention to the advances in the soft infrastructure that underlies the operation of the intellectual property system worldwide, namely the databases and information technology (IT) platforms, systems and tools.

“The various platforms that the Organization is providing are increasingly forming part of a single global IP infrastructure platform that will, in the coming years, become more integrated. It will serve the interests of governments, users and the interested public alike by increasing efficiency, cost-effectiveness and transparency, as well as by enhancing the quality of outcomes in the operation of the IP system worldwide”, said Mr. Francis Gurry.

Mr. Gurry also underlined that many of these platforms and systems represent a very good example of the implementation of the goal of the Development Agenda of mainstreaming development in the work of the Organization, because they are oriented to the inclusion of the developing countries and to building their capacity to use and to participate in the IP system.
