In today's realities, we increasingly understand the importance of intellectual property not only as an important element of the knowledge-based economy and market relations, but also as an engine that largely determines social and cultural well-being and allows us to overcome even the most difficult unforeseen circumstances, such as the COVID-19 pandemic. The Interstate Council allows us to jointly identify the best solutions to the existing problems of the functioning of the industrial property protection system.”

Participants in the meeting addressed a number of important aspects concerning regional cooperation in the field of IPR protection and enforcement, including the measures taken by them to combat infringements of intellectual property rights, including in the digital environment, and on the implementation of the Action Plan for the implementation of the third stage (2016 - 2020) of the Economic Development Strategy of the Commonwealth of Independent States until 2020.

The Parties exchanged information and views on the measures taken to overcome the negative consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic. At the same time, Member States discussed and took decisions on the priorities of the Council’s work in the next period, including its involvement in improving the legislative framework in the field of regional competence, and also the contribution of the Council and Member States to building IP evaluation system in the region, staff training and advanced training, etc.
