Press Kit:

Mr. Francis GURRY was born on May 17, 1951, in Australia and studied at the University of Melbourne, wh ere in 1974 obtained his Bachelor of Laws (LL.B) degree, and in 1976 defended his Master of Laws (LL.M) degree in the same field.

In the period 1977-1979 was a research student at the Faculty of Law, University of Cambridge, United Kingdom, wh ere in 1980 successfully defended the Ph.D. thesis, being awarded a Ph.D.

Mr. Francis GURRY began his WIPO career in 1985, initially as a consultant and senior program officer in the Development Cooperation and External Relations Bureau for Asia and the Pacific and from 1988 activates in the Industrial Property Law Section, Industrial property Division.

Mr. GURRY made an important contribution to the creation in 1994 of the Arbitration and Mediation Centre of WIPO, which allowed amicable settlement (non-legal) of several intellectual property disputes. He was instrumental in developing the highly successful uniform domain name dispute resolution policy [1].

He served on the WIPO top management team from 1997, initially as Assistant Director General and Legal Counsel, then from 2003 as Deputy Director General with responsibility for Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT); patent law and policy and International Patent Classification; WIPO Standards: WIPO statistics; the WIPO Arbitration and Mediation Center; Traditional Knowledge, Traditional Cultural Expressions and Genetic Resources.

He was appointed as Director General of the World Intellectual Property Organization on October 1, 2008. As Director General, Mr. GURRY is addressing many challenges to ensure that WIPO and the international intellectual property system continue stimulating innovation and creativity and contributing to market order worldwide. These challenges require answers to the following questions: How can WIPO and national IP offices meet the growing demand for patent services around the world? Are changes to the copyright system necessary to ensure its relevance in a rapidly evolving business and technological environment? How can respect for intellectual property rights be promoted in the face of widespread trade in counterfeit and pirated goods? How can WIPO contribute to the active participation and enjoyment in the benefits of innovation and the knowledge economy by all countries?

In response to the urgent challenges for intellectual property in the 21st Century, Mr. GURRY has led a comprehensive program of strategic realignment of the direction and work of the Organization. The program is aimed at realigning WIPO programs, resources and structures with a new set of strategic goals to enable it to respond more effectively to the rapidly evolving technological, cultural and geo-economic environment.

Mr. Francis GURRY is well-known as the author and coauthor of numerous publications on intellectual property protection issues.
